Our Model

At Endicott, all undergraduates are required to complete three distinct internships—and those in nursing, education, and athletic training complete program-specific experiential learning via clinicals, pre-practicums, and student teaching placements. That's because we know that experience is the first ingredient to creating a strong foundation to launching your career. In fact, we've been preparing our students for professional careers since the College's founding in 1939. In four years' time, Endicott graduates boast a degree in one hand and an impressive resume in the other—we take that seriously.

Our internships spanned 29 states plus DC and 14 international locations for the 22–23 academic year.

Wondering what your four years here will look like? Here are some ideas.

First Year: Participate in a 120-hour internship and gain industry experience from the get-go. Learn the ins and outs to working in the field you're passionate about and gain confidence in the skill set you bring to a team. You'll already be gaining valuable experience to add to your resume.

Sophomore: Take your real-world industry experience and continue to build on your resume by completing your second 120-hour internship. Practice your script and get involved in the performing arts at Endicott. You could star in productions like Waiting for Godot and West Side Story. If sports are more your thing, play for one of our intramural teams, like dodgeball or outdoor soccer; or, join a club sport, like cheerleading or crew.

Junior: Gain a global perspective through a study abroad program and strengthen your resume—even further—by participating in a service opportunity such as one of our alternative spring break programs or a Habitat for Humanity event.

Senior: Step into your semester internship with confidence and take on responsibilities as if you were one of the team. Learn from your supervisor what it's like to be a leader in the industry and begin positioning yourself for success as you look to land a job post-graduation.

Your future is up to you. We'll help you build it.
